PREFACE

My colleague and friend, Professor Clay, had nearly completed the preparation of this volume for the press when his untimely death occurred, in September, 1925. Though the work could not have the benefit of such final revision and characterization in detail as he alone could give, yet we have the assurance that in the main it appears as he would have wished to see it. Those who are familiar with his publications of cuneiform texts will know how much this means.

The James B. Nies Collection of Babylonian Antiquities—one of the collections belonging to Yale University—recently acquired a large number of Cappadocian tablets through purchase by Professor Clay. The present volume gives a selection from this important material. It contains autographed texts of two hundred and thirty-three of the tablets, by far the largest single collection of Cappadocian texts yet published.

The Cappadocian tablets, as is now well known, form a distinct class of cuneiform literature; both because the style of writing is different from that found anywhere else, and also because the Semitic dialect in which the texts are written has very striking peculiarities. As far as mere decipherment is concerned, the tablets here assembled for publication offer less difficulty than usual. They are excellently preserved, and the very large proportion of perfect specimens is to be noted. Some of them were still enclosed in their original envelopes, which were carefully removed by Professor Clay. One of these 'case tablets,' No. 110, was found on being opened to be a copy of No. 109, whose case is missing. Both tablets have been copied as illustrating the custom of executing legal documents in duplicate. There are indeed in this instance slight and unessential differences in the duplicates: a proper name is spelled in the one case Ma-nu-um-ki-Ištar, and in the other, Ma-nim-ki-Ištar; also, in No. 110 the same material fills an extra line.

An examination of the Catalogue will show that half of the texts are business letters (Nos. 1-99, 217-233). Of these, thirty-one are addressed to, and seven are written by Bu-šu-ki-in, a business man already well known from Cappadocian tablets published elsewhere. Fifteen (Nos. 100-114) are records of legal transactions involving the garum (assembly ?) of the cities Ganiš, Burušhatim, and Wahšušana. The rest are business records of various sorts, such as promissory notes, records of deposits, receipts, contracts, etc.

Scholars who are already acquainted with Professor Clay's autographed texts will not need to be told that the present copies are strictly accurate as well as beautifully executed. The 'ruled lines,' however, which characterize all Cappadocian tablets, have been deliberately omitted after the first two plates, since they contribute nothing to the interpretation of the material and unnecessarily complicate the appearance of the autographed text. The first two plates will suffice to illustrate the manner of the 'ruling.'

The seal impressions which are here presented in photographic facsimile were selected by Professor Clay as the most interesting among the many which are found on the tablets belonging to this collection, and the photographs were prepared under his guidance. As they are not always sufficiently distinct, he had planned to accompany them with outline drawings, which under his skilled hand would have been a valuable addition. He had made but a small beginning in this direction, however; and since such work cannot easily be delegated, it has seemed best to omit this feature.

The task of preparing a list of personal names, and a catalogue of the texts in this volume, was assigned by Professor Clay to his pupil, Mr. Ferris J. Stephens. The work was actually done under Professor Clay's supervision, but Mr. Stephens wishes to assume responsibility for any errors which may be found in this part of the book, especially in the reading of the names. He calls attention to the West Semitic character of a large number of the names, and the bearing of this fact on Clay's conjecture as to the nature of the population of Cappadocia in this period (Empire of the Amorites, chapter XIII). He has also gone through the material contained in the volume, making notes which have been utilized in this Preface.

The present publication, representing the last scientific labor of its author, contains much that will be found valuable to scholars in their attempt to solve one and another of the many problems of the Cappadocian dialect and the inner history of this part of Asia Minor. It will also be prized as his last contribution to the Yale Oriental Series, which was instituted and carried on by his energy.
